Backing Up Sedalia Police

Not only is fire a destroyer of property but also a disturber of the peace. When a citizen is threatened damage of his possessions he calls upon the fire department for protection. Seldom if ever does one turn in a false alarm because it is generally known such practice is against the law.

Similarly when a person is threatened with bodily harm, destruction of property or disturbance of his peace, he calls upon the police department for protection.

These are normal reactions of the taxpayer.

However, Sedalia's police department is encountering what seems to be a growing tendency to use policemen for "scare" purposes only. For instance altercations may arise among customers in tayerns or other establishments. In the resultant melee property is likely to be destroyed, the normal course of business is disrupted, the peace is disturbed.

Usually there is a panicky call to the police for help, and quick! Patrol cars are notified, they dash across town, endangering the drivers' lives and perhaps others, arrive at the scene expecting to encounter a riot, only to walk in on a setting of profound peace. Property has been destroyed, the peace broken, but not a soul wants to press the issue.

The same sort of reaction often occurs in residential districts where hysterical calls to the police for help are made as the result of family altercations. It's all blood and thunder until the police arrive. Then the scene appears to be as though the embattled participants were the very picture of a couple just starting out on their honeymoon.

Then there are cases involving prowlers, sneak thieves or shop-lifters who have actually been caught by the police after calls for help were made. When the culprit is made to face the property owner who has been the victim of trespass, he "doesn't want to prosecute." He's afraid he'll be sued.

There are occasions when the police get repeat calls to scenes where action is renewed after the police depart.

Repeatedly, however, victims evade pushing charges except, of course, when they have suffered bodily hurt. Otherwise they just "don't want to prosecute."

This sort of public softness has gotten into the upper brackets of crime. Juveniles involved in heinous morals crimes are being coddled in St. Louis. Only the other day a Kansas jury softened up on a kidnap-morals case. They just could come to throw the book at violent youth on a rapist spree.

Sedalia's police would like to backed up a bit and not subjected to so many "false alarm" calls. After all the police are bonded. They can't be expected to go in and grab just anyone by the collar if the complainant proposes to back off

And there are hazards and expense to the city in making these hurry-up cross town calls.

Holiday time may invite excessive exuberation in Sedalia. The police will be available to quell the rowdies who can't handle their liquid. But just in case they start tearing up things on private property, the police would appreciate it if the proprietors would become as stern with the offender as they are sometimes critical of the police.

Truman, Hoover Good Will Ambassadors

WASHINGTON - U. S. ambassadors have cabled from Southeast Asia that the tour of Russia's two perambulating bigwigs, Khrushchev and Bulganin, definitely built up good will for the Soviet. This reminds me of a suggestion I made to Harry Truman when he was President

Mr. Truman and I were not exactly on speaking terms then, so I made the suggestion through his secretary of State, Dean Acheson, and asked Dean not to identify me as the author or Truman would be sure to turn it down.

What I suggested was that Truman take a trip abroad somewhat as Bulganin and Khrush-. chev have now been doing, to win friends for the USA. I suggested that among other things he visit the Vosges Mountains in northern France where he fought as an artillery captain in the World War I and that this would indirectly remind the French people and the people of Europe of the many contributions we had made to them.

The simple, direct manner in which Mr. Truman meets people would make a big hit in Europe, I suggested to Acheson, but I also urged him not to mention me to Truman.

Mr. Truman, of course, didn't go. He was busy campaigning for Stevenson in 1952 and doing a lot of other things. So, about a year later, Mr. Truman was out of the White House and he and I had resumed diplomatic relations, I dropped around to see him and suggested that a trip abroad by him now would build up even more good will because he could travel as a private citizen, shaking hands with peasants and shopkeepers, teachers and factory workers, to show them how democratic a country we really have.

Mr. Truman immediately replied: "Oh, Dean Acheson told me all about that idea of yours about a year ago."

"But I told him not to tell you who suggested

"Well he did anyway," continued Mr. Truman and he went on to say that he would like tremendously to go abroad, but felt he couldn't do anything in the international field that General Eisenhower might not want done and that he hadn't even been invited to the White House since he left on Jan. 20, 1953.

"The first thing I did when I became President was invite Herbert Hoover to the White House," Truman said. "I told him to consider it his second home and to drop around whenever he came to Washington."

Mr. Truman obviously was hurt at the way the White House had snubbed him.

He did not go abroad then, and hasn't gone since. But with the obvious triumph of Bulganin and Khrushchev, the United States has got to send some high-ranking traveling salesmen to rebuild our fences in various parts of

A weakened Eisenhower cannot possibly travel any more. Therefore, why not draft both Harry Truman and Herbert Hoover, the two living ex-Presidents of the United States, to do some good-willing for him?

Note 1 — Bulganin told Prime Minister Nehru that he never dreamed visiting foreign countries could be such fun and he intended to visit France and Italy soon. He also said Stalin made a great mistake by shutting himself up and not letting the world realize that Russians are friendly people.

Note 2 - Though Hoover and Truman are miles apart politically, Hoover is helping collect funds for the Truman library. He has always been grateful for the way Truman invited him back to the White House, then appointed him head of a European food commission, then to help reorganize the government.

committee. This is the eighth time Brownell has ducked out on a controversial hearing, thereby clinching his reputation as the administration's most reluctant witness.

If the attorney general doesn't want to testify, he doesn't have to plead the Fifth Amendment or even honor a Senate subpoena. As a cabinet will probably not be the oldest senofficer, he can refuse to appear.

However, Missouri Senator Tom Hennings, in charge of the Human Rights investigation, has patiently and wearily tried to persuade him to testify. He wants Brownell's views on abuses in the government's loyalty program.

At first the attorney general ignored all polite invitations. Finally, fed up with Brownell's ducking, Hennings sent him a subpoena and told him to be on deck on December 16.

Brownell sent word back that he couldn't make it on that date, but would come another

Meanwhile Brownell has found time to accept invitations to various GOP political meetings.

Brownell's record as a reluctant witness covers just about every congressional hearing that might have embarrassed him. He refused to discuss the Justice Department's attitude toward small business before the Senate and House Small Business committees. He declined to talk about his anti-trust policies before the Senate and House anti-monopoly subcommittees. He ducked out on a House judiciary hearing on Civil Rights and a Senate judiciary hearing on immigration. He also turned down Tennessee Sen. Estes Kefauver's invitation to testify on the legal ramifications of the controversial Dixon-

Remarked Senator Kefauver: "He can dish it out but he can't take it."

John L. Lewis has said he would go fishing if Eisenhower and Adlai Stevenson are the opposing presidential candidates. . . . John was always hard to please. Chuck Bohlen, the best ambassador we've had in Moscow for years, is definitely resigning. He's fed up with John Foster Dulles' failure to follow his advice. . . . Llewellyn "Tommy" Thompson, now ambassador to Austria, will succeed him. Both are career men. . . . The Air Force is negotiating with General Electric to build a supersonic wind tunnel with winds 50 to 100 times the speed of sound. The tunnel will be used for testing missiles and rockets.

To Cut---Or Balance

The political wiseacres expect Congress to cut taxes in the 1956 election year whether the Treasury's figures seem to justify it or not. About all that can be said right now is that the budget indications are a little closer than a while ago to justifying such action.

Budget Director Rowland Hughes, in a report to President Eisenhower, said that the government hopes to balance the federal budget both in the present fiscal year (ending next June 30) and the following one.

The explanation comes from the continuing boom, which has sent tax receipts, especially from corporations, soaring to unexpected levels. The improved tax situation is good news, naturally. We haven't had many balanced budgets since the late 1920's. A question arises here. If a tax cut is to be voted, will the lawmakers so limit it as to keep the budget in balance? Or will they slash on such a scale as to plunge the nation right back into deficit financing? Everyone likes tax relief. But it would also be nice, for a change, to see a surplus in being
